In seven countries and six time zones:
Working together across the globe to serve our students

Holly Hubenschmidt & Emily Scharf
Webster University, St Louis, Missouri
Learning objectives

At the end of this session, attendees will be able to identify methods of collaboration and communication with colleagues from a distance.

At the end of this session, attendees will be able to explore possibilities for better communication across their own campus networks.
Webster Leiden

Image credits: Holly Hubenschmidt, Emily Scharf
Webster Vienna

Image credit: Emily Scharf
Webster Ghana

Image credits: Holly Hubenschmidt
Webster Thailand

Image credits: Holly Hubenschmidt
Thinking globally

User survey

Global perspective

Marketing materials
Projects on which we've collaborated

Establishing new libraries
Institutional repository
Catalog
Webinar
Instruction
Collection development
Networking opportunities - building your network

http://moviegalaxies.com/movies/442-It's-a-Wonderful-Life
Activity

Write down, then discuss with a partner:

1. In your library, three people with whom you discuss ideas
2. At your institution, three people with whom you currently collaborate to serve students
3. Three people with whom you'd like to collaborate
4. Three people with whom you think you should collaborate
Best practices and takeaways

Be aware of the country's infrastructure
Respect everyone's expertise
Pay attention to resources
Facilitate relationships
Think globally
Travel is critically important
Librarians are a central point within a university campus
Thanks!

Holly Hubenschmidt, Head of Instruction & Liaison Services
Co-Director, Global Leadership Academy
hollyh@webster.edu

Emily Scharf, Head of Research Services emilyscharf99@webster.edu